Join us for this timely discussion about Iran and its role in the world today. Despite the Iranian nuclear deal, tension and conflict in the Middle East has increased. What is Iran's role in the future of the region and how does this affect US interests in the Middle East? Dr. Samer Shehata discusses these and other pressing issues with Ambassador Mousavian.

Seyed Hossein Mousavian is a professional specialist at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. Among his many roles, Mousavian was Iran's Ambassador to Germany (1990-1997), Head of the Foreign Relations Committee of Iran's National Security Council (1997-2005) and Spokesman for Iran in its nuclear negotiations with the international community (2003-2005).

Samer Shehata, Associate Professor of Middle East Politics in the Department of International and Area Studies at the University of Oklahoma, is a specialist in Egyptian politics and US foreign policy toward the Middle East.
